ICT Specification for HR System Implementation

1. Introduction to ICT Infrastructure Compliance

This section outlines the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) requirements that the proposed Human Resources (HR) software solution must meet to ensure seamless integration within the existing enterprise infrastructure. The specifications are designed to guarantee compatibility, security, and performance across a distributed network environment that includes multiple remote sites, centralized data centers, and diverse connectivity options.

The organization's ICT architecture comprises a robust core built on Windows Server 2022, Hyper-V virtualization within Azure Stack HCI, and Active Directory services, supported by SQL Server for database management. Connectivity is maintained through a combination of 100MB fibre with microwave failover, SD-WAN optimization, and remote site links via microwave and LTE failover, ensuring resilience and continuity. Security is enforced through enterprise-grade firewalls (Sonicwall NSA2700) and Meraki routers, complemented by VPN access for remote users.

To comply with this infrastructure, the HR system must:

- Integrate with existing directory services for authentication and role-based access.
- Operate efficiently within bandwidth constraints at remote sites.
- Support deployment on virtualized environments and align with SQL Server standards.
- Adhere to stringent security protocols, including encryption, audit logging, and firewall compatibility.
- Provide high availability, backup integration, and scalability to accommodate organizational growth.

This compliance framework ensures that the HR solution not only meets functional requirements but also aligns with the organization's strategic objectives for reliability, security, and operational efficiency.
